ately by Italians. His wife was a few years the younger. They had three young children. Jeremiah Cotto boarded with the Frankelos. He had left a wife and three children in Italy to come to New York with money sent him by Mrs. Frankelosa. He had been in love with her before she emigrated from Naples with her husband.

Early on the morning of July 25, 1891, Frankelosa's body, shockingly cut and gashed, was found in a lonely spot at Forty-ninth street and Second avenue, near the Brooklyn city limits.

There were evidences of a terrible struggle. There were twelve stab wounds on the dead man's head and neck besides marks of blows by a club.

Mrs. Frankelosa told the police that she and Cotto had been intimate, and that she had known him in Italy, from whence he had come at her solicitation. With her lover the subject of getting her husband out of the way, so that they might marry, had been discussed.

Friday night, July 24, she said, Frankelosa started out on a vegetable run from his home at 144 Varadero, near the Tule ROBBED BY A PEDDLER'S PAL.

They Spent $230 of Mrs. Price's Money Before They Were Caught.

Mrs. Susan Price is an aged woman and lives by herself on Bridge street in the outskirts of Port Richmond, S. I. On Saturday she was robbed of $500 in money, every cent of her worldly possessions.

Andrew Robinson, aged eighteen, and colored, a fish peddler, called at Mrs. Price's house on that day to sell the old woman fish. While Mrs. Price was eating, the stranger, who was the old woman's bedroom, where the white Pinksy, aged thirteen, and Irving Van Horne, aged twenty-three, proceeded to the rear part of the house.

The peddler, which was found lying in the yard, up against the second-story window, entered the building and walked into the old woman's bedroom, where he forced open the bureau drawer and took from it $500 in bills. The youthful thieves then fled, and the peddler, who had been manning followed him.

The woman said she did not see Cotto again until nearly 4 o'clock Saturday morning, when he entered the room covered with dirt and blood. She asked whether her husband had been hurt, and he quickly turned away from her heavy sobs which were splashed with blood, and washed them. Then he tore his bloody clothing into shreds and stuffed it into a rag bag. He flicked the blood from a gory neck and buried it in the yard.

After washing and dressing himself he took the money, retaining the bloody clothing to sell. Upon his return he accompanied Mrs. Frankelose to the police-station to identify the body found.

Before being locked up, Mrs. Frankelose was taken to Cotto's cell, and there she pointed her finger at the cowering wretch, and in a voice that was the result of the anguish of all her trouble, Cotto soon afterward made a confession.

that they entered it.

Mrs. Price did not discover her loss until yesterday afternoon. She then reported the burglary to Sergt. Joseph Cobb, of the West New Brighton police station, who, after a last night arrested Robinson, Pickney and Van Horne, and when they were searched and found to be carrying a large sum of money was found in their possession, as well as gold watches, rings and other jewelry.

Robinson claimed that they had stolen the money. He said they had spent $300 of it in this city for the watches and the jewelry, and that the balance was in New York. The prisoners are locked up in the West New Brighton police station.

TAKEN OFF THE BENCH BY FORCE.

Paterson's Recorder Compelled to Yield to a New Police World.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)

PATERSON, N. J., March 28.—Frank Van Cleave, who has recently appointed Police Recorder, has been in consultation to Recorder James F. Stewart this morning and demanded his position.

Street Jail as an accessory.

OTHERS KILLED BY SHOCK.

The Fate of Kemmler, Jurgo, Slocum, Smiler, Wood, Lippy and McIlvaine.

The first murderer to be executed by electricity was William Kemmler, who was killed in his mistress, Mrs. Mattide Ziegler, in Buffalo. He was put to death in the Auburn State Prison Aug. 6, 1890, in a shocking manner.

He was followed by Jurgo, Slocum, Smiler, Wood, Lippy and McIlvaine.

Recorder Stewart refused to vacate the Bench, saying that the law giving Van Cleave the position was unconstitutional. Van Cleave again demanded the bench, but the Recorder refused to vacate.

Van Cleave then called in Chief of Police Graul, who told Stewart that he would better retire peacefully, that Stewart again declined.

Then Chief Graul removed Stewart by force, and arrested him.

The Recorder will test the law in his capacity by suing the city of Paterson for three years' salary.

Tuesday, July 7, four murderers were executed by electricity at Sing Sing. They were Shibuya Jugro, the Japanese who assassinated his fellow-countryman, Mura Comm'l; James Slocum, the ball-player, who chopped his wife to death with a hatchet; Harris A. Smiler, the Salvationist, who shot his wife to death, and Joseph Wood, the negro, who killed his fellow Aqueduct workman, Charles Ruffin.

According to the official report a current varying from 1,458 to 1,485 volts was applied twice to Slocum, three times each to Wood and Jurgro and four times to Smiler, but in spite of this the experts insisted that death was painless in each case, and that

The three other bodies were buried in quicklime in the prison graveyard and guarded for thirty days, and could not, therefore, be examined.

Marlin D. Lippy, who stabbed his wife to death in a Christie street tenement, was the next to sit in the death-chair. He was killed Dec. 7, 1891. The official report states that the current was applied four times. As this body was also buried in quicklime, no uncom-
